

Finish Command Inspection of Joliet Arsenal

Representing Lt. Gen. Wm. B. Kean, Commanding General, Fifth Army headquarters in Chicago, Col. J. E. McInerney assisted by 11 officers and four civilian technicians recently completed a command inspection of the Joliet Arsenal, it was announced by the Arsenal commander, Col. Ronald B. Currens.

The first of its kind at the Joliet Arsenal, this type of inspection procedure has been adopted by the Department of the Army replacing what was formerly known as the annual IG inspection. Members of these teams are carefully selected military and civilian personnel who are technicians in all phases of the service. Because of their several fields of specialization, the Army is in a better position to evaluate the performance of its facilities in conformance with applicable regulations.

Army authorities believe that this type of inspection will not only prove more effective, but will also assure the tax payers a greater degree of efficiency in the operation of its military establishments.
